Wayne County releases the Community Emergency Reference Guide

Executive Ficano reminds residents that September is National Preparedness Month

September 11, 2009

Wayne County — Today, Wayne County Executive Robert Ficano is launching the new Homeland Securities Community Emergency Reference Guide.

The program - available at www.waynecounty.com - is organized in several categories offering parents and families important information about all types of emergencies including what to do when someone is Choking, or needs CPR, how to handle a Heart Attack, Drug Overdose, how to protect your family in a Tornado, or what to do if there is a Chemical Emergency and when to call 9-1-1

“We care about your well being,” said Ficano. “We know that keeping your family safe and secure is a priority for you and that is why it is a priority for us.”

The program can be printed and kept where it is easily accessible.
